Hi Damian Reynolds,

Thank you for your notification. It appears you have made a claim on behalf of a company, but your account is not associated with a corporate email address. Please understand that YouTube receives a large number of fraudulent copyright takedown requests, some of which involve impersonating the company that holds copyright to the material in question. In order to prevent this, we need to ask you for more information.

Please help us verify that you are affiliated with the corporate entity listed as the copyright owner in your notice. There are several ways you can do this:

1. Forward this message to your corporate email, if you have one, and then reply to this email address from that account.
2. If your company doesn't have a corporate email address, please provide a website or other publicly available listing where we can verify your company's existence and your affiliation with it.
3. If neither of these options is applicable to you, please provide an explanation.
4. If you do not actually represent a company, please let us know.

Please understand that We won't be able to process your request until we have received this verification.

Hi Damian Reynolds,

We are concerned that some of the information in your takedown request may be fraudulent. Please understand that YouTube receives a large number of fraudulent copyright takedown requests, and we take abuse of that process very seriously (see YouTube, LLC v. Brady (D. Neb. 8:19-cv-00353)).

We remind you that in your allegation of copyright infringement, you stated that:

1. You are authorized to act on behalf of the owner of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed, and acknowledge that any person who knowingly materially misrepresents that material or activity is infringing may be subject to liability for damages.
2. You understand that abuse of this form will result in termination of your YouTube account.

For each video in question, please explain how you're authorized to make this claim, including supporting documentation or other evidence wherever possible.

If we don't receive a detailed explanation from you within 7 days, your YouTube account may be terminated. You may be able to avoid termination if you retract your takedown request. If you wish to do so, please reply to this email with "I hereby retract my claim of copyright infringement."
